
VA ~ Office of Tribal Government Relations Newsletter ~ June/July/August 2017

Note from the Director

Greetings and welcome to this super combined summer/almost fall edition of the VA Office of Tribal Government Relations newsletter. The summer months seem to have flown by this year. I'll start off by sharing information about events coming up on the horizon. Over in the Northwest, the Suquamish Tribe, with sponsorship from the Washington State Department of Veterans Affairs, will be hosting a Native Veterans Summit September 26-27, 2017 at the Suquamish Clearwater Casino Resort. You may register for this no-cost training by clicking on: https://2017_native_american_veterans_summit.eventbrite.com. On-site registration will also be available and if you have questions or need additional information, don't hesitate to reach out to Terry.Bentley@va.gov. Also happening in Washington State during this same time frame will be the National Indian Health Board's (NIHB) 34th Annual National Tribal Health Conference in Bellevue, WA. For more information or to register for this event, click on: <http://www.cvent.com/events/2017-national-tribal-health-conference/event-summary-be08625cbe0048709be75768565b43b9.aspx>. The NIHB conferences always provide a wealth of important information pertaining to Indian Health.

Looking towards the Southwest, on September 13-14, 2017, the White Mountain Apache Tribe will be hosting a Veterans Training Summit at the Hon-Dah Resort Conference Center. About a week later, on September 23rd, the San Carlos Apache Tribe will be hosting a Veterans Summit. For information on both Arizona events, please email LoRae.Pawiki@va.gov. October is shaping up to be a particularly busy month and we're looking forward to supporting many events nationwide. On October 10, 2017, the Arizona Area Agency on Aging along with the Inter-Tribal Council of Arizona, Inc. will be hosting two Veterans Benefits sessions; one from 9:15 to 10:30 and the second one from 10:45 to noon. Ms. Pawiki can be contacted for more details.

In the southern plains, on October 5-6, 2017, the Otoe-Missouria Inter-Tribal Veterans Stand Down will be held in Red Rock, Oklahoma. This is the fourth annual Inter-Tribal Veterans Stand Down held in Oklahoma. Different tribal leaders have initiated support for this collaborative event which includes service providers from Tribal Services Programs, the Indian Health Service, the VA, Department of Defense, State of Oklahoma Department of Veterans Affairs, Veterans Services Organizations and many others. Our new boss, VA Deputy Secretary for Intergovernmental Affairs, Thayer Verschoor, (who hails from Arizona) is looking forward to attending and welcoming participants and volunteers. For more information about the Stand Down, reach out to Mary Culley at: Mary.Culley@va.gov.

Looking further eastward, on October 10-11, two of our OTGR team members, Mary Culley and Peter Vicaire, will be attending the United and Southeastern Tribes (USET) Annual Conference in Cherokee, North Carolina where they are scheduled to provide updates to the Veterans Committee. They are also currently working on an OTGR Veterans Training Summit to take place on October 12 in Cherokee, NC, right after USET. For more information, don't hesitate to reach out to either Mary or Peter.Vicaire@va.gov. A "Save the Date" flyer for the event can be found below in the newsletter.

As for highlights of the summer: Our OTGR team was involved in organizing and supporting four Veterans Training and/or Benefits outreach events (Gathering of Warriors hosted by the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde, Grand Ronde, OR; Veterans Training Summit hosted by the Nez Perce Tribe, Lewiston, ID; Native Veterans Summit hosted by the Reno Sparks Indian Colony, Reno, NV; and a Veterans Benefits Event, Omaha Tribe, Walthill, NE). Our team also served as panelists presenting information on the VA Native American Direct and providing updates on Tribal HUD-VASH (Veterans Assisted Supportive Housing) program (along with HUD Officials) during the Annual Native American Indian Housing Conference held in Nashville, TN; coordinating presentations during the Society for American Indian Government Employees (SAIGE) meeting held in Phoenix, AZ; supporting Veterans Camp Chaparral in Yakama, WA; attending and interviewing a Navajo Code Talker and his family during Navajo Code Talker Day (Window Rock, AZ); providing VA information during the IHS Partnership Conference (Denver CO), then following up with IHS to schedule a series of webinars focused on VA benefits; coordinating VA information for presentation to the HHS/CMS/ITU training held in Nashville, TN, and Danvers, MA; attending and supporting the National Gathering of American Indian Veterans (Cantigny Park, IL); touring and engaging in a briefing session between VHA officials, the gracious leadership and dedicated staff from the IHS Phoenix Indian Medical Center (this session provided insightful information about best practices as well as improving communication and coordination efforts between VHA and IHS Veteran patients in the Phoenix area).

Last but not least and certainly something important for tribal officials and Indian health leadership to keep on the radar is the outcome of the Veterans Health Administration Roundtable discussion(s) led by VA Deputy Undersecretary for Health – Community Care, Dr. Baligh Yehia. The session(s) will continue to engage tribes in discussions focused on next steps for the Reimbursement Agreements between VA and Tribal Health Programs. The first of these roundtables was held at the Heard Museum in Phoenix, AZ on July 12. If any of our readers have questions or recommendations about these roundtable sessions, please feel free to email me directly at Stephanie.Birdwell@va.gov.

As always, if you have suggestions, requests, recommendations or submissions to the OTGR newsletter, please don't hesitate to email us at tribalgovernmentconsultation@va.gov or check out our website: www.va.gov/tribalgovernment. We look forward to hearing from you.

Happy Reading,

Stephanie Birdwell

Council supports Congressional bill to name U.S. Navy ship “USNS Navajo”

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. – On Wednesday, U.S. Sen. John McCain (R – AZ), chairman for the U.S. Senate Committee on Armed Forces, and ranking committee member Jack Reed (D – RI), announced the completion of the committee’s markup of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2018, according to a release from Sen. McCain’s office.

The NDAA contains report language that would support the naming of a new class of Navy tug ships, beginning with the “USNS Navajo.” The U.S. Navy has had a longstanding tradition of naming Navy tug and salvage ships after Native American tribes.

In Nov. 2014, the 22nd Navajo Nation Council’s Naabik’iyáti’ Committee unanimously passed resolution NABIN-63-14, which urged the U.S. Navy to name a T-ATS Class Tug and Rescue-Salvage ship the “USNS Navajo.”

Speaker for the 23rd Navajo Nation Council LoRenzo Bates (Nenahnezad, Newcomb, San Juan, Tiis Tsoh Sikaad, Tse’Daa’Kaan, Upper Fruitland) stated that the efforts of the 22nd Navajo Nation Council was vital in the ship-naming initiative, and that the current Council remains in full support for the proposed “USNS Navajo.”

“The Office of the Speaker issued letters requesting Congressional members to support the name designation through the Navajo Nation’s supporting resolution, and Council is very thankful that our voices were heard by our nation’s leaders,” said Speaker Bates.

The U.S. Navy will be decommissioning eight ships, four remaining T-ATF Powhatan Class fleet ocean tugs, and four Rescue-Salvage T-ARS Safeguard Class ships. The eight existing ships will be replaced with a single class of about eight or nine vessels to be designated as “T-ATS Tug and Rescue-Salvage” ships.

Speaker Bates expressed gratitude to Sen. McCain for advocating on behalf of the Navajo Nation and Acting Secretary of the Navy Sean Stackley for providing the name recommendation for consideration within the bill.

“With the diligent advocacy of Sen. McCain and Sec. Stackley, the Navajo Nation thanks them for their continued support. Without their efforts this initiative would not have been possible, and we are sincerely grateful for their assistance,” stated Speaker Bates.

The Senate Committee voted unanimously today to pass the bill, which authorizes $700 billion in funding for the U.S. Department of Defense and the national security programs of the U.S. Department of Energy. During the markup, 277 amendments were considered and adopted, and the legislation moves forward to the full senate for consideration.

Alaska Natives honored for protecting territory during WWII

Here's an article by Rachel D'Oro that ran in the Washington Post on May 25, 2017

Officials on Friday posthumously honored more than a dozen members of a largely Alaska Native citizen militia who protected the U.S. territory from the threat of Japanese invasion during World War II, bringing closure to their families for a service that went unrecognized for decades. Gov. Bill Walker and state veterans affairs officials presented Army discharge papers to the relatives of 16 deceased members of the Alaska Territorial Guard during a ceremony ahead of Memorial Day weekend. The event was an emotional time for Rebecca Czyz, the niece of militia member and Inupiat Eskimo sharpshooter Laura Beltz Wright, who was among just 23 women in the 6,400-member unit.

Czyz grew up with her aunt, who died in 1996. She said Wright was an adventurous woman who could outshoot most. She once ran mail by dog sled between villages and later owned a parka shop in Anchorage. She once told her niece that she would be fine with just a tent and a frying pan. Czyz knew her aunt had served in the Territorial Guard but never paid much attention to that part of her life. She became more interested as she got older, and seeing the discharge papers gave her closure, Czyz said.

"I just felt very proud," she said. "It would have been an honor for her to be here, but at least her family can accept this award for her." Also recognized was Jay B. Mallott, father of Lt. Gov. Byron Mallott, who could not make the event after his flight was canceled. The lieutenant governor's son, Ben Mallott, received his grandfather's papers. "It feels pretty good to have his service honored and recognized," he said.

Alaska was still 17 years away from statehood when the militia formed in 1942 after Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor and points along Alaska's Aleutian Islands. Nicknamed Uncle Sam's Men and Eskimo Scouts, the volunteer members stepped in to watch over the 586,000-square-mile territory, which was vulnerable to further attack with the National Guard pressed into federal service. And they did it without pay.

The militia disbanded with little fanfare in 1947, almost two years after the war ended. But members were not formally recognized by the Army as military veterans until 2004. Nearly 2,600 discharge papers have been issued since then by the Army, which has worked with the state Department of Veterans and Military Affairs to obtain the documents. Officials at Alaska Native Heritage Center in Anchorage plan to make the ceremony a yearly event as more papers are issued. Mercedes Angerman, deputy director of the state military agency, said obtaining the discharge papers is a lengthy and sometimes challenging process. Surviving relatives can have different last names than the Territorial Guard members. Sometimes families don't realize their relative served in the unit or they don't know the member's date of birth, which is required. "Sometimes it's like catching the wind," Angerman said. She said the goal is to ultimately obtain a discharge for every member. Once families receive the documents, they qualify for a free headstone for the militia members from the National Cemetery Administration.

Solar Homecoming at Pine Ridge Reservation ~ Veteran Receives Solar Panels

Here's an article from Grid Alternatives which ran on July 27, 2017.

When most high school students picture their perfect homecoming, it usually involves limousines, corsages, and the like. But for Lina Krueck, “homecoming” had a different, more impactful connotation. Born on the Pine Ridge reservation, the high school student recently returned to work with GRID’s Tribal program to install a grid-tied solar system for a veteran homeowner. Lina, who has not visited Pine Ridge since infancy, was welcomed warmly by the tribal elders upon her return.

“The people I met were incredible.” said Lina. “I felt so at home, and I felt a real connection with people I had never even met before. It was a very special trip for me. I’ve never felt like a part of a community the same way I did while I was there on Pine Ridge. I’m so happy that I had this opportunity!”

The project was made possible through a partnership with Oglala Sioux Lakota Housing (OSLH) and Ecological Action, a high school club from Denver, CO that focuses on sustainability and renewable energy. The high school students held fundraisers to help offset the cost of the system and visited the GRID Colorado office to participate in special solar photovoltaic workshops from the tribal team leading up to the installation. For many of the students, it was their first time to the Great Plains and visiting one of the seven sub-tribes that make up the Great Sioux Nation. The students worked hard alongside community members to bring the solar array to life. According to Jeff Boyce, the faculty leader of Ecological Action, it was a life changing experience for many of the students. Homeowner Loran Conquering Bear was grateful to receive the system. He raved about GRID’s work and the impact energy efficiency could have on the families at Pine Ridge, many of whom struggle to pay their bills.

“I think this project is awesome with the cost savings because the majority of everyone’s income here is spent on propane and electricity, and in winter time it’s harder because they have to pay sometimes half their income. I’m on dialysis and I have to travel 400 miles a week to get treatment, and paying for gas is a lot. Our money is really budgeted, and getting this help on our electricity bills will really help.”

Mr. Conquering Bear is part of the largest population of veterans on a reservation, and sees the struggles that many of his neighbors have finding employment. But he was encouraged by the job training component of GRID’s work. “I think it’s awesome you guys are training people to do [solar], there aren’t many prospects here, and there’s a lot of people that want jobs.”

Senator Udall Introduces Bill to Combat Native American Veteran Homelessness

Here's a press release from Senator Tom Udall's website from June 14, 2017.

Bipartisan legislation would authorize critical tribal housing initiative

WASHINGTON — U.S. Senator Tom Udall joined Senators Jon Tester (D-Mont.), John Hoeven (R-N.D.), and Johnny Isakson (R-Ga.) in introducing bipartisan legislation to combat homelessness and improve direct support services for Native American veterans. Hoeven and Udall are the chairman and vice-chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee. Tester and Isakson are the ranking member and chairman of the Senate Veterans' Affairs Committee.

The legislation, the Tribal HUD-VASH Act would formally authorize a joint Tribal housing initiative between the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (VASH) program, which provides rental and housing assistance to homeless and at-risk homeless veterans in Indian Country.

Only 26 of the 567 federally recognized Native American Tribes received HUD-VASH vouchers under the current Tribal HUD-VASH demonstration, yet Native Americans serve in the military at a higher percentage than any ethnic demographic in the United States.

"Tribal members in New Mexico and throughout the nation have a proud history of military service, and they have served our nation with honor and distinction. Unfortunately, research from HUD and the VA shows that Native veterans are disproportionately affected by homelessness," Udall said. "It is our solemn duty to ensure Native veterans have the services they have earned when they return home, including safe and quality housing. That's why our bill tackles this unacceptable reality head-on by authorizing the Tribal HUD-VASH Program to ensure that critical housing and support services are available to homeless veterans living on or near Tribal lands. I am proud to join my colleagues on both the Senate Indian Affairs Committee and the Senate Veterans Affairs Committee to introduce this bipartisan bill, and I look forward to working with them to get it passed by the full Senate." "Every day that Native American veterans struggle with homelessness is a day that we have failed to uphold this country's promise to our veterans," Tester said. "It is critical that these resources are available for every person who bravely served our nation, and that includes the veterans in Indian Country."

"No veteran, including Tribal veterans, should face homelessness," said Hoeven.

“This legislation will help ensure that Native Americans who courageously served our country have access to safe and quality housing. I look forward to working with my colleagues in the Senate to quickly pass this bipartisan bill.”
“No veteran should be without a home,” said Isakson. “This bipartisan legislation will help continue efforts to provide housing and supportive services to Native American veterans.”

HUD-VASH has supported homeless veterans since 2008 but prior to 2015, Native American tribes and tribal housing authorities were unable to access HUD-VASH funds. Udall joined Tester to help pass legislation that required HUD and the VA to set up a pilot program to provide Native American tribes entry into the HUD-VASH program — that pilot expired last year. The Tribal HUD-VASH Act would authorize the program and ensure that at least 5 percent of all HUD-VASH vouchers are set aside for Native American Tribes and Tribal housing authorities to address veteran homelessness. The bill would also ensure that HUD and the VA modify the initiative through Tribal consultation to better guide available resources to homeless Native American veterans.

In addition, the bill directs the Indian Health Service to provide any assistance requested by HUD or the VA to implement the initiative, and directs HUD, the VA, and the Indian Health Service to conduct a review of the initiative every five years. The Senate Indian Affairs Committee heard testimony on the Tribal HUD-VASH Act yesterday.

Homeless veterans now have a place they can call home through HUD-VASH program

This article ran in the Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribal Tribune on August 18, 2017

During the 2015 annual convention of the National Congress of American Indians, then HUD Secretary Julian Castro announced a new demonstration program for Native American Veterans. The HUD-Veterans Affairs Supportive Housing (HUD-VASH) program combines Housing Choice Voucher (HCV) rental assistance for homeless Veterans with case management and clinical services provided by the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA).

The Cheyenne and Arapaho tribes were one 26 tribes selected to be a part of the HUD-VASH program, and though the process has been long and sometimes unbearable, three Cheyenne & Arapaho tribal veterans now have a place to call home ... and more are in the process of being approved.

Murray “Sue” Whiteshield, Robert Blackwolf and John Decker know when the rains, snow and ice come, they will be safe, warm and protected in their own homes. Whiteshield now resides in El Reno, Okla., and Blackwolf and Decker both live at the Clinton Independent Living Center ... all through the HUD-VASH program. “For me, we were just hoping to get into a decent place with a roof over our heads where we could take care of each other and not have to live in a roach infested hotel, on the streets, or continue living in our truck,” Whiteshield said.

Whiteshield first heard of the HUD-VASH program after becoming homeless in Oklahoma City and transitioning to El Reno. “It was 2016 and I started going to the meetings because I had heard Russell was in charge of the new tribal VA program. I came out here to meet Russell and he invited me to come to the next regular meeting and that’s where I found out about the details of the program,” she said.

At that meeting Whiteshield met Carissa Dobrinski from the Tribal HUD-VASH program. “During the meeting Russell kept pointing to this lady, I didn’t know what he was pointing at, then after the meeting he said, ‘this is the lady I wanted you to meet because she’s the lady in charge of the new program called HUD-VASH, helping homeless and near homeless veterans.’ And I believe that was in November 2016,” Whiteshield said.

Whiteshield immediately applied, and within a couple of weeks was approved after meeting all the criteria set forth in the program. Though a fast approval, the wait for a home would prove to be a lot longer. “My VA check is only $486 a month and because of my identity theft case a few years back and never being able to get that straightened out, I got a ruling that I was well below the poverty level from HUD-VASH like the third week in November 2016, but I almost gave up on them because I didn’t get a home until March 2017,” Whiteshield said. But the wait, though long, was certainly worth it for Whiteshield. After meeting all the criteria, doing a walk through in the home to approve it for the HUD-VASH, Whiteshield and her partner moved into their new home and off the streets.

“We used to take turns sleeping in the back of the truck. I would lay back there and get some rest, then we would switch places. We would find parks with grills to cook our food, it was no way to live, but what else could we do? We are both elderly. I didn’t know it would take so long, sometimes it seemed like forever and I was about to give up,” Whiteshield said. “But now we are in a home where I can relax and work on my bead work and when the weather is bad it’s nice to be in a place that is dry and warm. I want to thank Carissa with HUD-VASH, Bill Tall Bear at Housing and the governor of the C&A tribes for going ahead and signing my approval money for my rent through the HUD-VASH program.”

Veterans questions get answered at Veterans Training Summit

Here's an article by Kaila Lafferty from KLEW (CBS-3)

Local veterans, getting their questions answered and their voices heard. Thursday was day-two in a three-day summit for local veterans. The veterans training summit's goal is to bring together the three branches of veterans' affairs and other agencies to provide information to local veterans about their benefits and other VA services. The summit is open to all veterans and links them to experts from various fields.

Terry Bentley works with the Office of Tribal Government Relations, and said native veterans have unique challenges when it comes to care under the VA. Bentley said, "Native veterans serve in higher numbers than other ethnicities per capita. So while Native veterans may be smaller numbers in general in the United States, they serve in higher numbers in every war to this date. And yet they seek VA services the least"

Bentley said their partnership with the Nez Perce Tribe here in our area helps them reach a greater number of those native veterans. The summit includes a mobile health unit so participants can get a check-up on the spot.

Kelly Golden is a blind rehabilitation specialist who knows what it's like for veterans with vision problems. "There's a lot of elderly people in the rural areas and when you have a vision impairment you may lose your ability to drive, so with my program I go into their homes and teach them in their homes, in their environment and also out in the community where they're actually functioning," said Golden.

Summit marks fifth year of helping veterans obtain benefits

Here's an article by Dean Rhodes that ran on July 10, 2017 in "Smoke Signals," a news source for the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde.

Willamina resident Roberta Davis is living proof that Tribal Council Chairman Reyn Leno's oft-stated contention -- "If it helps one veteran, then it's worth it" -- regarding the annual Veterans Summit is true. If it wasn't for the 2016 Veterans Summit, Davis, an Army veteran, probably would never have summoned the courage to apply for military sexual trauma benefits from the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs.

While attending her second Veterans Summit last year, Davis sat in on a female Healing Circle that was facilitated by Elizabeth Estabrooks, Women Veterans coordinator with the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs, and Air Force veteran Linda Woods, who is a summit regular.

After listening to the other female veterans share stories of sexual harassment while serving in the military, Davis shared her story of being sexually abused by her commanding officer and executive commanding officer while serving in the Army from 1977 through '80. "I wouldn't apply for my MST benefits until last year," Davis said on Friday, July 7, the second day of the fifth annual Veterans Summit held at Uyxat Powwow Grounds. "It was very hard to come to terms with it after decades and the system that they use ... they interview you, but it's like an interrogation. "I put this off for years and years knowing that I had a right to do it, but I wasn't going to go through the emotional part. But being here, with the Healing Circle, I could actually do it."

Estabrooks accompanied Davis when she went to Veterans Affairs and endured the pension and compensation interview. The result? She was ruled 70 percent disabled for military sexual trauma and now receives a monthly $1,300 check from Veterans Affairs. But the money is nowhere near as important as the principle to Davis.

“I have managed to survive through something that most men would never have survived through, spending two years of being abused like that,” Davis said. “I come here and it just charges me and fires me up. ... I’m 60 years old. This happened in my 20s. I thought I got it under control and I never did. It was my personal shot back at those guys who did it.”

Davis now handles military sexual trauma claims as the Veterans Service Officer for the Yamhill County Disabled American Veterans chapter. An estimated two-thirds of women who have served in the Army have endured some degree of sexual trauma, she said.

“I know that if it wasn’t for Linda (Woods) and this last year, I never would have filed,” Davis said. “I never would have healed or started healing. It changed my life.”

Leno, a Vietnam War-era Marine Corps veteran, gave a welcoming speech when the Veterans Summit opened for the fifth time at 1:15 p.m. Thursday, July 6. “You can’t wait until a veteran becomes a statistic,” Leno said. “You got to help them now, not later.”

Other welcoming speeches were delivered by Oregon Department of Veterans’ Affairs Director Cameron Smith, Veterans Affairs Office of Tribal Government Relations Specialist Terry Bentley and Portland Veterans Affairs Health Care System Director Michael Fisher.

“The Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde are truly committed to helping veterans and their family members,” Bentley said. “My hat’s off to the council, Chairman Leno ... thank you for allowing us to be here at this wonderful place of honor to take care of veterans and their families.”

Fisher said David Shulkin, incoming director of Veterans Affairs under the Trump administration, has five priorities – greater health care choices for veterans, modernization of systems, focusing resources, suicide prevention and improved timeliness. “Twenty veterans a day commit suicide,” Fisher said. “Six of those are in our VA system and 14 of those are not. We have to locate those people and provide services and connect them to some people who can help them.”

Other Tribal Council members who attended the two-day summit included Secretary Jon A. George, Jack Giffen Jr., Chris Mercier, Tonya Gleason-Shepek, Denise Harvey and Brenda Tuomi. Navy veteran Nick Sixkiller (Oklahoma Cherokee) performed the master of ceremonies duties and the colors were posted by the Grand Ronde Honor Guard – Raymond Petite, Al Miller, Richard VanAtta, Dennis Kleffner and Daniel Helfrich. Helfrich also gave the blessing to open the Thursday afternoon session.

Charlie Tailfeathers (Cree/Blackfeet), Woods (Odawa) and Iraqi War veteran John Courtney (Warm Springs) performed the solemn prisoner-of-war ceremony before Crystal Purdy, a funeral director from Lincoln Memorial Park & Funeral Home in Happy Valley, spoke about helping veterans reconnect with civilian life. “There is no way to erase experience,” Purdy said. “Returning veterans need to find a sense of purpose again. ... Be kind, give a crap and be selfless.”

Oregon Department of Veterans’ Affairs Veterans Services Director Mitch Sparks and Training Coordinator Joe Glover delved into the intricacies of applying to the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs for disability payments and pension eligibility. Glover distributed a 46-page packet that detailed how to apply to Veterans Affairs for benefits and discussed presumptive conditions – medical problems Veterans Affairs will automatically cover for military personnel who served in combat areas within specified dates.

Portland Veterans Affairs Benefits Office Assistant Director Michael Rohrbach said that events like the Grand Ronde Veterans Summit are helping get the word out regarding veterans benefits and that they are seeing an increase in applications.

As in previous summits, the outer edge of the Uyxat Powwow Grounds' arbor was occupied by information tables that included the Department of Veterans Affairs Crisis Line, Department of Justice's Bureau of Prisons, Military Helpline, Social Security Administration, National Association for Black Veterans and the Veterans Center mobile unit.

The Tribal Mobile Clinic and Diabetes Education recreational vehicle also was present. Health & Wellness Clinic Dental Assistant Tammy Baird and Dental Hygienist Sheila Blacketer signed veterans up for dental and blood pressure checks.

Tribal Nutrition Program Manager Kristy Criss-Lawson and her staff served continental breakfasts, lunches and dinners in the meal tent and a cultural sharing night was held in achaf-hammi, the Tribal plankhouse, on Thursday. Cultural Resources employees Bobby Mercier, Jordan Mercier and Brian Krehbiel performed the blessing song to open the Friday session and Veterans Special Event Board Chair Steve Bobb Sr. gave a welcoming speech.

Estabrooks, an Army veteran, discussed the "I Am Not Invisible" campaign she created in association with Portland State University. Twenty-two posters of female veterans from Oregon were created as an awareness raising campaign that not all veterans are men. The posters and the women's stories can be viewed on the Oregon Department of Veterans' Affairs website at www.iani.oregondva.com. "We don't talk about women veterans enough," Estabrooks said about the white male-dominated culture of the military.

Courtney, who served a year in Iraq from 2005-06 as an Army Ranger, also discussed post-traumatic stress disorder that occurred after he returned to Colorado following a 12-hour firefight in Baqubah. Undiagnosed PTSD led to a drinking problem and eventual dissolution of his marriage before he returned to the Warm Springs Reservation and received counseling. Woods also discussed her experiences as a woman warrior who enlisted in the Air Force in the 1960s as she has done at previous summits. Friday afternoon workshops and activities included a healing and self-care village, mental health first aid, crafts and traditional jewelry making, and continued staffing of the many information and resource booths.

The summit concluded with separate sharing circles for male and female veterans and a forgiveness ceremony led by Native Wellness Institute Executive Director Jillene Joseph. Social Services Director Dana Ainam, who helped check in summit attendees, said 55 veterans registered and 83 people attended, including presenters and people who staffed the information tables and booths. The Veterans Summit was sponsored by the Gresham-based Native Wellness Institute, the Grand Ronde Tribe and Veterans Affairs' Office of Tribal Government Relations.

Partnership with National Indian Health Board for Veteran Traumatic Brain Injury Training

TULSA, OK: August 17, 2017, the VA Office of Tribal Government Relations specialist Mary Culley and the Oklahoma City VA Department of Neurology Physician's Assistant Shannon Thomas, recently collaborated with the National Indian Health Board during the Annual American Indian/Alaska Native National Behavioral Health Conference event.

Speaking during the general plenary session, Ms. Thomas provided information/training to tribal and Indian Health Service clinicians, tribal leaders, and Veterans on the topic of understanding the “Treatment and Management of Mild Traumatic Brain Injury in Combat Veterans.”

Opportunities to share best practices and provide cross training between VA, tribal and IHS behavioral health clinicians is a win/win for Veterans receiving care from the tribal and federal health care systems. Kudos to Ms. Thomas for providing a very thorough, and well-presented technical subject that was easily understood by all.
